

BALKAN CRIMINOLOGY

■ One-Week International Intensive Course Dubrovnik / Croatia, 05-09 October 2015

Crime and Criminology in the Balkans

The 'Balkan Criminology' One-Week Intensive Course provides in-depth and up-to-date knowledge about the state of art in crime research in the Balkans, while introducing its participants to the basics of criminological methodology, phenomenology and etiology. It is part of the overall scientific programme of the Max Planck Partner Group for 'Balkan Criminology' - MPPG (www.balkan-criminology.eu) which is jointly established between the Max Planck Institute for Foreign and International Criminal Law in Freiburg/Germany (www.mpicc.de) and the Faculty of Law - University of Zagreb/Croatia (www.pravo.hr) and funded by Germany's leading research foundation - the Max Planck Society (www.mpg.de). The course serves as a platform for the dissemination of criminological expertise gathered through the MPPG scientific activities: The MPPG research focuses (Violence, Organized Crime and Illegal Markets; Feelings and Perceptions of (In)Security and Crime; International Sentencing), as well as the expertise gathered at the annual conferences. This concept of transforming newest research findings and expertise from and for the region into transmittable knowledge for course participants ensures a holistic approach that combines education with science and research. The added value for course participants is, besides the knowledge itself, the networking opportunity with colleagues from the region and the possibility to present their PhD/Master/Diploma thesis before internationally and regionally renown experts.

For further information please visit balkan-criminology.eu/en/events

or contact our course manager

Ms. Reana Bezić at r.bezic@balkan-criminology.eu

University of Zagreb
Faculty of Law

Max Planck Society

Max Planck Institute for Foreign and International
Criminal Law

■ Basic Course Structure

Participants arrive on Sunday, 04 October 2015. The course starts on Monday morning and lasts until Friday noon. The programme includes key note lectures, students' presentations, soft skills trainings and extensive exchange and discussion.

In addition, a Dubrovnik city tour is offered. More details about the programme will be available at the Balkan Criminology web site in due time.

The course is accredited by Zagreb Faculty of Law and offers 4 ECTS credits.

■ Course Directors

Hans-Jörg Albrecht, Max Planck Institute, Freiburg, Germany • Anna-Maria Getoš Kalac, University of Zagreb, Croatia • Michael Kilchling, Max Planck Institute, Freiburg, Germany • Almir Maljević, University of Sarajevo, Bosnia and Herzegovina • John Winterdyk, Mount Royal University, Canada.

■ Venue: Inter University Centre Dubrovnik

Dubrovnik has a long history as an independent city-state, always promoting a rich and fertile environment for scientific and artistic developments at the cross-roads of a wide range of trade and contact routes located between East and West, North and South. Dubrovnik is considered a perfect setting for contemporary efforts to exchange knowledge and ideas. After the academic part of the course, participants may explore Dubrovnik's rich history, visit museums, churches, walk the City walls, visit other scientific institutions, attend concerts, or just enjoy the natural Mediterranean ambience.

■ Early Registration

We suggest to communicate your interest to participate early by contacting the course manager. The contribution to the course costs is moderate, in any case no more than 150 €.

Photos: 2014 Course Participants, MPPG Balkan Criminology, 2014.
View over Dubrovnik, Freeimages.com, 2013.

